50 YEARS AGO

June 1972 saw Radio Six celebrate its ninth anniversary with a whole week of special programmes, including - on the actual anniversary day, June 6th - "Nostalgic Nine" one of those mildly interesting compilations featuring clips from old programmes that have now become the staple diet of so many digital television channels.

Was there anything else of note? Well, to be honest, not really. A rather odd "Tony Currie Outdoor Show" with TC and two portable tape recorders (one to record, the other to play the music) going for a walk in Perthshire but meeting nobody and therefore making it a pointless exercise. A fair smattering of repeats; live coverage of the Ardrossan Civic Week interdenominational outdoor service (Tony Currie out on the roof doing a commentary) and recorded highlights of the annual "Trooping the Colour" which really works much better on television.

Radio Kepplestone Weekend in Aberdeen wound down for the summer and Radio Six simply went off the air until August!
